

16-TYPE MODEL OF PERSONALITY

The MBTI[®]

Source of Energy ▼	Processing of Information ▼	Approach to Decision Making ▼	Need for Structure ▼

EXTROVERTS	SENSORS	THINKERS	JUDGERS
Extroverts are energized by interacting with other people, participating in events, and are known to act quickly.	Sensors are pragmatic realists who focus on facts and their own real-world experiences.	When making decisions, Thinkers are logical, highly analytical and evaluate the facts.	Judgers like to make plans and lists, follow schedules, and are highly organized.

INTROVERTS	INTUITIVES	FEELERS	PERCEIVERS
Introverts are energized by ideas, reflection and working alone. They tend to analyze and reflect before taking action.	Intuitives focus on patterns, future possibilities and enjoy abstract thinking.	When making decisions, Feelers are careful to consider people, feelings, and various points of view.	Perceivers are spontaneous, flexible, and highly adaptable to their outside environment.

The 16-type personality model is based on the theories of Carl Jung who believed humans experience the world through four psychological functions: sensation, intuition, feeling and thinking. The official Meyers-Briggs Type Indicator[®] is named after its creators, Katharine Briggs and her daughter Isabel Myers. To complete the official MBTI[®] assessment visit <https://www.capt.org>.